

Global Aerospace Announces New General Aviation Safety Support Program

02/01/2010

Global Aerospace, Inc. is pleased to announce the creation and delivery of their 2010 SM4 Safety Program.

Parsippany, NJ, (February 1, 2010) - Global Aerospace, Inc. is pleased to announce the unveiling of a new, dynamic, and innovative aviation safety and support program. In partnership with leading experts in human factors, safety management, emergency response and family assistance, the SM4 program will provide Global Aerospace's United States based General Aviation customers with access to a coordinated series of innovative training seminars, electronic newsletters from nationally recognized safety experts, an interactive website monitored by key safety experts, and an impressive suite of direct on-site services. SM4 is the first initiative that combines all four critical Safety Management components: Planning, Prevention, Response, and Recovery into one integrated program that is designed to assist customers while ensuring regulatory requirements are met.

The program, just one in a series of new customer oriented initiatives being released by Global Aerospace, will synergize the world's leading aerospace insurer with its General Aviation customers. This sentiment is resounded by Jeff Bruno, Executive Vice-President of General Aviation, who states, "General Aviation customers want insurance partners who support front-end safety and systems initiatives. We understand the value of having our customers evaluate and pro-actively manage their risk. Therefore, the benefits of a program like SM4 are mutually aligned. The real value of SM however lies in its ability to continuously provide real time, real world applications to our customers. We are committed to continuously improving the program and to ensuring that the system will provide something for everyone for years to come."

Initially SM4 will partner with Convergent Performance, LLC, Baldwin Aviation, Inc. and Fireside Partners, LLC. Convergent Performance, LLC will provide focused SM4 Human Factors training and support; and Baldwin Aviation Inc. will provide Safety Management Systems programs, training and support. In the same context, Fireside Partners, LLC will provide training and support for incident response planning and recovery and family assistance. All partners are committed to using a fully cooperative approach to total system development and all training and services will be linked. "

You can learn more about the 2010 SM4 initiative and program partners by going to the Global Aerospace website (www.global-aero.com) and clicking on "Safety."

Contact information for Global Aerospace, Inc.:

GLOBAL AEROSPACE, INC.
One Sylvan Way
Parsippany, NJ 07054

One Sylvan Way, Parsippany, NJ 07054
Telephone: (973) 490-8500 Fax: (973) 490-5600

Telephone: (973) 490-8500

Fax: (973) 490-5600

About Global Aerospace

Global Aerospace is the world's leading aviation insurer and provides underwriting and claims expertise from its worldwide headquarters in London, a network of six offices in the United States, as well as Toronto, Paris and Zurich.

Global Aerospace has been dedicated to the aerospace industry for over 85 years and underwrites insurance on behalf of some of the world's largest and most secure insurers and reinsurers.

Global Aerospace provides insurance solutions for airlines, aviation product manufacturers, general aviation aircraft operators, airports, other aviation service providers and space risks.

For additional information on Global Aerospace, please visit www.global-aero.com.

One Sylvan Way, Parsippany, NJ 07054
Telephone: (973) 490-8500 Fax: (973) 490-5600